

GUI is a graphical user interface, it uses visual icons and click and drag actions to do things on a computer.

A CLI is a command-line interface, it uses lines of code to navigate and do things on a computer.

You can accomplish the same things with both, but GUI is generally easier to understand, and CLI is faster once you understand it.